Home Visiting Program

New York

New York Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program is funded in part through federal investments from the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program (Home Visiting Program), and provides voluntary, evidence-based home visiting services to at-risk pregnant women and parents with young children.

The Home Visiting Program, which builds upon decades of scientific research, provides voluntary, culturally-appropriate, individually-tailored supports to families in their homes, including providing information about children's health, development, and safety, and when appropriate, referrals to support services.

Through federal grants from the Home Visiting Program, in fiscal year 2015, home visitors in New York:

- made 37,343 home visits to 5,336 parents and children in 3,012 families;
- enrolled 2,010 new parents and children to the program; and
- served families living in communities in 8 counties across the state, or 14% of New York counties.

The Home Visiting Program in New York:

- increased the number of high-risk pregnant and postpartum women and families receiving evidence-based home visiting services; and
- improved coordination and collaboration across maternal and infant health and early childhood systems.

Like all Federal Home Visiting Program grantees, New York uses home visiting models that are proven effective. New York leverages federal funds to implement the following evidence-based models to serve children and families across the state:

- Healthy Families America
- Nurse-Family Partnership

The Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program is administered by the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) in close partnership with the Administration for Children and Families (ACF). The Program supports at-risk pregnant women and families, and helps parents of children from birth to kindergarten entry tap the resources and hone the skills they need to raise children who are physically, socially, and emotionally healthy and ready to learn.

Research shows that home visits by a nurse, social worker, early childhood educator, or other trained professional during pregnancy and in the first years of life improve maternal and child health, prevent child abuse and neglect, increase positive parenting, and enhance child development and school readiness.
